East Asian Review

Journal published by the Asian Research Institute

East Asian Review is published by the Asian Research Institute, Osaka University of Economics and Law. It provides a forum for the discussion of issues in East Asian studies. Its central concern is politics, economics and cultures of East Asia.

The Asian Research Institute was established in December 1987 for the purpose of contributing to the peace and prosperity of East Asia through academic research on east Asia, in addition to conducting exchange and promoting development within the East Asia region. The Asian Research Institute is comprised of a large number of researchers from within Japan as well as from other countries around the world, and it holds lectures and academic conferences, conducts cooperative research, as well as issues research publications. From its very inception, the institute has actively conducted exchange with overseas research institute. With the cooperation of such institutes, the Asian Research Institute has held a large number of international symposiums and conducted cooperative research.
